Author Bio

Short Version:

Paige Britt grew up in a small town in Texas, with her nose in a book and her head in the clouds. She studied journalism in college and theology in graduate school, but never stopped reading children's books for life's most important lessons. She spent ten years as an instructional designer before embarking on her own writing career. Her first book, The Lost Track of Time, was released in 2015 from Scholastic Press.

Longer Version:

Paige Britt grew up in a small town in Texas, with her nose in a book and her head in the clouds. She studied journalism in college and theology in graduate school, but never stopped reading children's books for life's most important lessons. She spent ten years as an instructional designer developing interactive learning experiences for both children and adults before leaving the corporate world to stare out the window and make up stories about things that aren't real (but are absolutely true). She is the author of The Lost Track of Time (Scholastic Press, 2015) which Publishers Weekly called ". . . an exuberant homage to the power of imagination and creative problem-solving, as well as the importance of making time for oneself, one's dreams, and one's friends."

In addition to being a writer, Paige is a meditation instructor and spiritual director, helping people ask big questions and discover their own answers. She lives in Georgetown, Texas, with her husband.
